

Education Abroad in Guatemala

The Department of Food, Nutrition, Dietetics and Health. (FNDH)

<http://www.he.k-state.edu/fndh/>

Starting September, 2018

Service Learning Opportunities:

- Teach nutrition lessons, all ages
- Tend community gardens and teach cooking classes
- Work in medical clinics
- Assist local Mayan physician
- Conduct community health assessments
- Develop physical activity programs
- Disease prevention programs
- Tutor in reading, English, computers, & business skills
- Research opportunities

Want to Know More?

Visit with your advisor or contact:

Linda Yarrow at lyarrow@ksu.edu

Program Details

The Department of Food, Nutrition, Dietetics and Health is excited to offer an extraordinary education abroad program for our students who desire to have a life transforming experience! The focus is on service-learning to help the indigenous Mayan people improve their quality of life.

- FNDH students with junior, senior, or graduate status
- Program will run year-round beginning September, 2018
- Enroll in FNDH courses; variable lengths of stay in Guatemala
- On-site K-State Program Manager to assist students while living, learning, & serving in Guatemala
- Scholarship opportunities available

Working and studying abroad makes you an active and engaged part of a global community. This experience can enhance your job prospects, make you competitive in an international economy, give you a broader outlook, and inspire personal and professional growth. You will have opportunity to acquire and cultivate skills and make a positive difference in the lives of the indigenous Mayans.

